

Did You Know That There is a Crack in Your Pot?

Psalm 139:14 NLT

“Thank you for making me so wonderfully complex! Your workmanship is marvelous – how well I know it”

Have you ever walked in shame? Have you ever wished you were someone else, or that you had what someone has? This is common when we see through our eyes of flesh. We hate for others to see the cracks in our lives.

We can't make the necessary changes in our lives until we see the flaws and the treasures that make up our being.

You cannot become all that God created you to be until you embrace your identity – the unmistakably unique and flawed you; that God made for a purpose.

There are a few factors that influence your identity, or the flaws that others see. These factors were beyond your control.

The factors of life are:

- Your parents
- Your pains
- Your problems
- Your potential
- Your Perception
- Your Purpose

You don't get to mix your cards, you don't get to choose your cards, you can only choose to play the cards that you have been dealt.

No flaw is sinful or shameful – it's the way God wired you! 1 John 4:1-26

For His Glory!!!

2 Tim2:21

John 9:3

Your flaws are a part of your custom design, and God has a relevant plan in mind. What will your testimony be?

Like the blind man, I say, “I don't know about this or that, but I do know what he has done for me”
